Amazingly, how can teachers best support students in their learning? Teachers need to be able to inquire sensitively, listen carefully, and look thoughtfully at student work, as well as to structure situations in which students write and talk about their experiences. This builds a foundation of pedagogical learner knowledge (Grimmett and MacKinnon 1992).

Subsequently, how do students learn to learn? Students learn by connecting new knowledge with knowledge and concepts that they already know, most effectively in active social classrooms where they negotiate understanding through interaction and varied approaches.

Also, how do teachers teach? Although there are many different ways to teach effectively, good instructors have several qualities in common. They are prepared, set clear and fair expectations, have a positive attitude, are patient with students, and assess their teaching on a regular basis.The term â€˜effective learningâ€™ describes methods of teaching and learning that actively involve children in their own learning and personal development. Think of it as children learning how to learn, rather than simply parroting information or copying techniques from teachers or other children.
